

Seed Classification Bracket

Dividing Up the Seeds

To complete this bracket, select two opposing observable characteristics per round and divide your seeds into two groups based on those characteristics. List the observable characteristics on the horizontal bracket lines each round. Repeat the process until each group contains only one type of seed. Make more bracket lines as necessary. HINT: The term “observable characteristics” does not include the names of the seeds or their uses, so words like “bean” and “snack” should not be used.
